this is a new edition of dr webster s the nirankari sikhs 1979 which has been recognized as single most important work on the history of baba dayal and his successors it updates the earlier edition not only by dealing with the past forty years of nirankari history but also by taking into account subsequent scholarship on the history of sikhism especially during the first half of the nineteenth century further it also provides two additional primary sources of nineteenth century nirankari history along with the nine included in the earlier edition this new edition will be of value not only to those scholars interested in nirankari history but also to those seeking a fuller understanding of the evolution of sikh identity since the nineteenth century sikh identity has been a major issue for nirankaris in recent decades because they have been confused with the sant nirankari mandal which makes no claims to a sikh identity nirankaris like other sikhs base their beliefs and practices upon the guru granth sahib and revere the ten sikh gurus for this reason they view themselves and are considered by other sikhs to be minority group within sikhism they are distinguished from other sikhs most obviously in not fully embracing the khalsa tradition of the sikhs and in having a continuing hereditary line of human gurus how such similarities and differences have affected their own and the very nature of sikh identity over the past two centuries is an important part of this history please note taylor francis does not sell or distribute the hardback in india pakistan nepal bhutan bangladesh and sri lanka what is time how does our sense of time lead us to approach the world how did the peoples of the past view time this book answers these questions through an investigation of the cultures of time in christianity islam buddhism judaism and the australian dreamtime it argues that our contemporary world is blind as to the significance and complexity of time preferring to believe that time is natural and unchanging this is of critical importance to historians since the base matter of their study is time yet there is almost no theoretical literature on time in history this book offers the first detailed historiographical study of the centrality of time to human cultures it sets out the complex ways in which ideas of time developed in the major world religions and the manner in which such conceptions led people both to live in ways very different to our contemporary world and to make very different kinds of histories it goes on to argue that modern scientific descriptions of time such as einsteins theory of relativity lie much closer to the complex understandings of time in religions such as christianity than they do to our common sense notions of time which are centred on progress through a past present and future
